Briton Admits He Left Secrets on the Subway

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP) — A British information officer admitted today that that he lost secret Government documents in a London subway train.

Extracts from the documents, which the officer was taking to a European Economic Community meeting, were later published in a radical weekly London magazine.

Robin Gordon Walker, 36 years old, a senior officer with the Central Office of Information, was fined the equivalent of $883 at Bow Street Magistrates' Court after admitting a violation of the Official Secrets Act.

"It seems to me that you have been a fool rather than a knave," the magistrate, Ralph Lownie, told him as he passed sentence.

Mr. Gordon Walker's father, Patrick, was Foreign Secretary from October 1964 to January 1965 in the Labor Government of Harold Wilson before being raised to the peerage as Lord Gordon-Walker.
